

Notes

These notes provide source citations for quotations and facts contained in the text. The specific sources are described here in summary form. Thus, the first entry below, referring to a quotation on page 1 of the text, reads: “P. 1 Moodie, “The spirit of past ages”: McKillop, Intelligence, p. 4.” The full entry would be: “Susanna Moodie, quoted in A.B. McKillop, A Disciplined Intelligence: Critical Inquiry and Canadian Thought in the Victorian Era (Montreal: McGill-Queen’s University Press, 1970), p. 4. A complete listing for McKillop, A Disciplined Intelligence, is found in the bibliography in John A., under Secondary Sources, General Works Consulted. The notes provided here are thus a companion piece to the book’s Note on Sources and Bibliography.

INTRODUCTION

- P. 1 Moodie, “The spirit of past ages”: McKillop, Intelligence, p. 4.
P. 2 Smith, “crazy quilt”: The Week, April 10, 1884.
P. 3 “This frail-looking man”: MacLennan, Scotchman, p. 108.
P. 4 “species of heiress”: Prentice, Canadian Women, p. 86.

CHAPTER 1: LAIRDS OURSELVES

- P. 8 Macdonald birthdate: Johnson, Affectionately, p. 2 (n).
P. 8 Macdonald birthplace: Gibson and Patterson, Historic Kingston, p. 71, letter from Dr. Govin White, University of Glasgow.

- P. 10 Macdonald grandfather: Pope, Memoirs, pp. 2–3; and Creighton, Young Politician, p. 9
- P. 10 Shaw-Clark-Macpherson-Macdonald clan: Johnson, Affectionately, p. 3.
- P. 11 Helen Macdonald description: Biggar, Anecdotal Life, p. 82; and Creighton, Politician, p. 13.
- P. 11 (fn) Dornoch trial of “witch” in 1727: Ged Martin, John A. Macdonald: Scotsman or Canadian? Standard Life Lecture in Canadian Studies, 2004, p. 5.
- P. 12 Helen Macdonald’s love of jokes: Biggar, Anecdotal Life, p. 82.
- P. 12 Helen Macdonald dances jig in street: Weekly British Whig, June 4, 1891.
- P. 12 Helen Macdonald’s love of Gaelic: Biggar, Anecdotal Life, p. 83.
- P. 13 Helen Macdonald’s prediction of “more than an ordinary man”: Biggar, Anecdotal Life, p. 28.
- P. 14 George Forbes, “we are lairds ourselves”: Peter Russell, Attitudes to Social Structures and Social Mobility in Upper Canada (Lewiston, NY: E. Mellen Press, 1990), letter to John Forbes, April 20, 1840, Forbes Papers, Edinburgh.
- P. 15 Moodie on servants: First Drafts, pp. 54–55.

CHAPTER 2: A BOY’S TOWN

- P. 17 “I grow weary of its immensity”: Parr Traill, Backwoods of Canada, p. 34.
- P. 17 (fn) feeding porridge to passengers: Harper, Image and Reality, p. 7.
- P. 19 Sydenham’s ride to Montreal: Robertson, Old Toronto, p. 295.
- P. 21 Kingston epidemics: Angus, “Health, Emigration and Welfare,” pp. 120–25; and Preserve and Defend, p. 188.
- P. 22 Dickens, Kingston a “very poor town”: Preserve and Defend, p. 109.
- P. 23 Galt, “settlement in the backwoods of Canada”: Skelton, Galt, p. 48.

- P. 24 Fingard, “absence of mass demonstrations”: “The Winter’s Tale,” p. 341.
- P. 24 Preston, Kingston as “stragglingly built”: Lockhardt, “Early Life,” p. 26.
- P. 26 Kingston Council, one drink shop for every seven or eight men: Preserve and Defend, p. 107.
- P. 27 Hugh Macdonald’s ad for “groceries, wines, vinegar, powder”: Phenix, Demons, p. 12.
- P. 27 Death of James Macdonald: Pope, Memoirs, p. 4; and Macpherson, Macdonald, p. 78.
- P. 28 Montreal survey on children’s deaths: Silver, “An Introduction,” in Monet, Canadian History, p. 340.
- P. 29 Three-mile walk to school with sisters: Biggar, Anecdotal Life, p. 23.
- P. 29 Louisa Macdonald compared to her brother, “the ugliest man”: ibid., p. 84.
- P. 29 Macdonald, “never had a boyhood”: Pope, Memoirs, p. 6.
- P. 30 Macdonald, “university education”: ibid., p. 5.
- P. 31 Macdonald, “the fascination of the turkey”: Macpherson, Macdonald, p. 81.
- P. 32 Macdonald as compulsive reader, ibid., p. v.

CHAPTER 3: THE RIGHT TIME TO BE A SCOT

- P. 35 St. Andrew’s preceptor takes liking to Macdonald: Creighton, Politician, p. 39.
- P. 37 Edinburgh as “self-consciously modern”: Herman, How the Scots, p. vii.
- P. 37 Scots “deal[ing] with a dominant culture”: ibid., p. 115.
- P. 40 Disraeli on Scots at head of poll: ibid., p. 347.
- P. 42 Ross, “entire educational system of the country”: McKillop, Intelligence, pp. 25–29.

- P. 43 Macdonald in “Macdonald Soft Tartan Kilt”: Martin, Macdonald: Scotsman or Canadian, p. 10.
- P. 43 Campbell on Macdonald’s “tone of voice & manner”: Martin, “Sir John Eh?” p. 2.
- P. 43 Journalist on “moot question where he was born”: ibid., p. 3.

CHAPTER 4: HORSE DEALING, TAVERN KEEPING AND THE LAW

- P. 45 Hugh Macdonald on demand for lawyers: Biggar, Anecdotal Life, p. 28.
- P. 45 John Langton, “I know of no money-making business in Canada”: Early Days, p. 201.
- P. 46 George Mackenzie, “say nothing on business” and “A dead-and-alive way with them never goes”: Lena Newman, Album, p. 25; Teatero, “Dead and Alive,” thesis; and Creighton, Politician, p. 27.
- P. 48 Macdonald, “The one thing I have always admired”: Lockhardt, “Early Life,” thesis, p. 25.
- Pp. 49–54 Macdonald law cases: Teatero, “Dead and Alive,” thesis; and Creighton, Politician, pp. 43, 55–68.
- P. 54 Macdonald in real estate in 1842: Johnson, Macdonald, p. 200.
- P. 58 “Join the Orange Lodge and become an alderman”: Kingston Daily News, June 8, 1891.
- P. 58 Wilson, “Secure a handsome independence first”: LAC, Macdonald Fonds, vol. 544, p. 257.

CHAPTER 5: A CONSERVATIVE IN A CONSERVATIVE COUNTRY

- P. 61 Macdonald’s wedding, exchanges gold rings with Isabella: Phenix, Demons, p. 60.
- P. 62 Macdonald, “To fill a gap”: Parkin, Macdonald, p. 12.

- P. 62 Disraeli, “I love fame”: Aldous, Lion and Unicorn, p. xiv; and Trudeau, “a great man”: English, Citizen, p. 78.
- P. 63 Macdonald’s reply to nomination as candidate: Biggar, Anecdotal Life, pp. 56–57.
- P. 64 Macdonald election manifesto: Pope, Memoirs, p. 34.
- P. 67 First statute of Upper Canada re the poor: Malcolmson in Tulchinski, Preserve and Defend, p. 45.
- P. 68 Estimate of 9 per cent government spending on social programs and education: Wallace, “Origins of Social Welfare State.”
- P. 68 Liberal MP, “The moment a Government is asked to take charge”: Waite, Life and World, p. 37.
- P. 69 Bishop Strachan on national debt “consistent” with interests of country: Martin, Causes of Confederation, p. 170.
- P. 70 Insults in Legislature debates: Skelton, Galt, p. 203.
- P. 70 Legislature debate, De Bleurey, et al.: Debates, May 8, 1846, vol. IV, part II, pp. 1296–97.
- P. 71 Macdonald-Blake duel: Creighton, “Macdonald and Kingston,” p. 75; and Swainson, Macdonald of Kingston, p. 36.
- P. 71 “His walk, then, as ever, was peculiar”: Biggar, Anecdotal Life, p. 61.
- P. 72 Langelier, “qui faisait toute sa gloire”: Waite, Life and World, p. 6.
- Pp. 72–73 Macdonald, “The law of primogeniture”: Debates, Feb. 1, 1845, vol. IV, part I, pp. 1235–38.
- P. 73 Macdonald’s activities on behalf of Kingston: Johnson, Macdonald, p. 205.

CHAPTER 6: GOING HEADLONG

- P. 75 Macdonald’s letter to Margaret Greene, July 12, 1845: Johnson, Affectionately, p. 35.
- P. 78 Isabella’s second letter of 1848: ibid., p. 54.
- P. 79 (fn) patent medicines containing opium: Newman, Album, p. 41.

- P. 82 Macdonald, “The weather here is so fine and warm”: Nov. 20, 1848, Johnson, Affectionately, p. 42.
- P. 84 Macdonald, “The Boy is flourishing,” and “I feel quite solitary”: Montreal, Sept. 28, 1847, ibid., p. 53.
- P. 85 Macdonald, “he is now however great friends with her”: Kingston, July 9, 1848, Johnson, ibid., p. 56
- P. 86 “grey, unrelieved tragedy”: Creighton, Politician, p. 260.

CHAPTER 7: NEW GUYS WITH NEW IDEAS

- P. 88 “failed, with astonishing uniformity”: Creighton, Politician, p. 69.
- P. 89 Campbell and Macdonald rewrite law partnership: ibid., pp. 100–101; and Phenix, Demons, p. 61.
- Pp. 89–90 “The key to understanding the main features of Canadian national political culture”: Stewart, Origins, p. 85.
- P. 92 Descriptions of Lord Durham: Wade, French Canadians, pp. 180–83; Hyam and Martin, Reappraisals, pp. 73–74.
- Pp. 92–93 Quotations from Durham Report: Bliss, Documents, pp. 50–62; Wade, pp. 184–96.
- Pp. 94–95 “Miracle” of French-Canadian revival: Wade, The French Canadians, pp. 284–308; also in Heintzman, “Political Culture of Quebec”; and Dickinson and Young, History of Quebec.
- P. 95 “clergy was as much a means of national unity”: Trofimenkoff, Dream, p. 115.
- P. 96 Durham Report as “the greatest state document”: Hyam and Martin, Reappraisals, p. 75.
- P. 96 Lord Russell, “impossible for a Governor to be responsible”: Finlay, Structure of History, p. 138.
- P. 97 Sydenham election tactics: Abella, “Sydenham Election.”
- P. 97 Bagot, “Whether the doctrine of responsible government is openly acknowledged”: McInnis, Canada, p. 237.

- P. 97 British attitudes to Responsible Government: Bodelson, Studies in Imperialism.
- P. 98 Baldwin descriptions: Careless, Pre-Confederation Premiers; and Cross, “The Waste that Lies before Me.”
- Pp. 98–99 LaFontaine description: Dictionary of Canadian Biography, vol. XII.
- P. 100 “With a kind of bacterial thoroughness”: Monet, in Hamelin, Political Ideas, p. 27.

CHAPTER 8: A SHORT TIME BEFORE THE LONG GAME

- P. 104 Macdonald, “it would make me too dependent on Govt”: letter to Margaret Greene, Jan. 20, 1847, Johnson, Affectionately, p. 48.
- P. 104 “could not be called a great speaker”: Pope, Memoirs, p. 647.
- Pp. 104–105 journalist, “careless utterance”: Martin, “Sir John Eh?” p. 2.
- P. 105 Fabre, “he is languid at times at stating his case”: Pope, Memoirs, p. 658.
- P. 105 “not infrequently contrived to mislay”: ibid., p. 658.
- P. 105 Fabre, “too clever and too well-versed”: ibid., p. 658.
- Pp. 105–106 Macdonald’s memory for names: Biggar, Anecdotal Life, pp. 206–209.
- P. 106 Patteson literary argument: Waite, Macdonald, p. 40.
- Pp. 106–107 Macdonald, “an Indian once said to myself”: Smith, “John A. Macdonald and Aboriginal Canada.”
- P. 108 Macdonald, “I returned last week from Toronto” and “She had as much to do as she is able for”: Dec. 3, 1848, Johnson, Affectionately, p. 60.
- P. 109 Macdonald, “She is like the ‘Invisible Lady’” and “Since September last I have been alone”: Jan. 20, 1850, ibid., pp. 67–68.
- P. 110 Campbell-Macdonald partnership negotiations: Johnson, Letters of Sir John A. Macdonald, vol. 1, p. 158, and (fn) pp. 158–59; and Creighton, Politician, p. 148.

- P. 110 Macdonald, "I am more than usually tight now": letter to Benson, Johnson, Letters of Sir John A. Macdonald, vol. 1, p. 178.
- p. 110 Macdonald, "I haven't got a shilling to jingle": letter to Saddler, ibid., vol. 1, p. 260.
- P. 111 Buchanan, "I would not have supposed it possible": Waite, Life and World, p. 17.
- P. 111 Macdonald, "I thoroughly understand that business": Johnson, Macdonald: Young Non-Politician, p. 144.
- P. 112 Campbell, "You will remember": Pope, Memoirs, p. 148.
- P. 112 Macdonald, "If I don't carry a thing" and "There's no use crying": Waite, Life and World, p. 22.
- Pp. 113–14 Rose, description: Dictionary of Canadian Biography, vol. XI; and Frankfurter, Baneful Domination, pp. 210–12.
- P. 114 "personally, he was most attracted to Rose": Pope, Memoirs, p. 422.
- P. 115 Ogle Gowan, relations with Macdonald and rape charge: Akenson, Orangeman, pp. 249, 295–300.
- P. 116 Effect of Canada of British free trade: Finlay, Structure, pp. 148–50; and Shippee, Relations, pp. 3–6.
- P. 116 Elgin, "property in most Canadians towns": Shippee, Relations, p. 6.
- P. 117 Montreal manifesto calling for annexation: Macpherson, Macdonald, p. 201; Finlay, Structure; and Skelton, Galt.
- P. 116 (fn) Carnegie, "trade follows the lowest price"; Hyam and Martin, Reappraisals, p. 4.
- P. 117 Kingston meeting: Creighton, Politician, pp. 140–45; and Stewart, "Imperial Policy," thesis.
- P. 118 Macdonald, "all arrangements have long been made": Johnson, Affectionately, p. 66.
- P. 119 Macdonald, "We have got Johnnie back again": ibid., p. 71.

CHAPTER 9: ENLARGING THE BOUNDS

- P. 120 Macdonald, “We are a good deal hampered”: Feb. 9, 1854, Johnson, Letters of Sir John A. Macdonald, vol. 1, pp. 200–203.
- P. 123 Formation of Grit party: Careless, Union of the Canadas, p. 167; and Underhill, National Political Parties.
- P. 125 Macdonald, “little ability, no political principles and no strength in numbers”: Stewart, Origins, p. 61.
- P. 125 Macdonald, “pre-Adamite Tories”: letter to Charles Lyndsay, June 18, 1860, Johnson and Stelmack, Letters of Sir John A. Macdonald, vol. 2.
- P. 126 Brown on possible Reform-Conservative alliance: Careless, Brown, vol. 2, p. 188.
- Pp. 127–29 Macdonald letter to Brown Chamberlain: Jan. 21, 1856, Johnson, Letters of Sir John A. Macdonald, vol. 1, pp. 337–40.
- P. 130 “They [Scots] manifested a real goodwill”: Siegfried, Race Question, p. 55.
- Pp. 130–31 Macdonald’s fluency in French: From commentaries to author by historians Keith Johnson and Donald Smith. Sulte, “Macdonald was fond of reading French novels”: Sweeny, George-Etienne Cartier, p. 102 (also fn p. 131). Ged Martin, in “Sir John Eh? Macdonald,” cites a unilingual Quebec MP who claimed to have had many conversations in French with Macdonald. Smith cites a biography of Senator F.X.A. Trudel, who, in a February 1887 edition of L’Etandard, claims Macdonald spoke not a word of French. Martin, in “Sir John Eh?” cites the Dictionary of Canadian Biography as an authority that Laurier spoke English with a slight Scots accent. Taché’s last letter to Macdonald, entirely in French, is quoted in Creighton, Politician, p. 418.
- P. 132 Macdonald, “steeped to the lips in corruption”: Swainson, Macdonald, p. 42.

- P. 132 MacNab, “all my politics are railroads”: Simpson, Spoils, p. 68.
- P. 132 Macdonald, “The party is nowhere”: letter by Macdonald to Campbell, March 8, 1855, LAC, Macdonald Fonds, vol. 194.
- P. 133 Macdonald, “the Parson”: Johnson, Affectionately, p. 15.
- P. 134 Louisa’s rental arrangements with Williamsons: Pope, Memoirs, p. 650.
- P. 136 Macdonald, “Isabella has been very, very ill” and “desperately ill all last week”: Johnson, Affectionately, pp. 75, 77.
- P. 136 Macdonald, quoting Hugh John, “I like Kingston best”: ibid., p. 77.
- P. 137 Macdonald, “I am carrying on a war”: March 17, 1856, ibid., p. 77.
- P. 138 Macdonald, “The great reason I have always been able to beat Brown”: Pope, Memoirs, p. 653 (fn).
- Pp. 138–39 Brown description: Dictionary of Canadian Biography, vol. X; Careless, Brown, and Careless, “Brown’s Political Ideas,” in Careless at Work, pp. 67–74.
- P. 138 “A campaign is George Brown in the pulpit”: Willison, Reminiscences, p. 178.
- P. 139 (fn) Brown, “men-stealers: Careless, Brown, vol. 2, p. 27.
- P. 140 Sheppard, “Take him on the ground of abuses”: Waite, “Ideas and Politics in British North America,” p. 100.
- P. 140 Macdonald, “every man should support his own religious teacher”: Debates, vol. XI, part I, pp. 546–48.
- P. 141 Brown versus Macdonald re Kingston Penitentiary: Creighton, Politician; Careless, Brown; and Debates, 1849 (pp. 203, 207, 208), 1850 (pp. 1507–09), 1851 (pp. 519–20).
- Pp. 141–42 Macdonald, “If there is one thing to be avoided”: Debates, vol. XI, part III, p. 2296, March 23, 1853.
- P. 143 Brown, “What has French-Canadianism been denied?": Careless, Brown, vol. 1, p. 166; Bliss, Canadian Historical Documents, pp. 92–94.

- P. 144 “Church and state could not really be separated”: Morton, Shield, p. 316.

CHAPTER 10: FORMS ARE THINGS

- P. 146 Macdonald, “You will see by the enclosed”: Johnson, Letters of Sir John A. Macdonald, vol. 1, p. 296.
- P. 146 Macdonald, “I am told there are a dozen [Conservative] candidates”: letter to Henry Becher, Dec. 5, 1857, ibid., p. 466.
- P. 147 A.J. Macdonnell to replace Campbell: Creighton, Politician, p. 208.
- P. 148 “Contrary to the claims of the Liberal politicians”: Sowby, “Macdonald the Administrator,” thesis, p. ii.
- P. 148 “He took these duties seriously”: Johnson, Macdonald, p. 206.
- P. 149 Macdonald, “I have infinitely more to do”: ibid., p. 207.
- P. 149 “He attached great importance to his correspondence” and “was exacting in his demands”: Pope, Memoirs, pp. 639, 655.
- P. 150 Macdonald, “the devil of a departmental reformer”: Waite, Life and World, p. 20.
- P. 152 Macdonald, “I’d as soon go to hell”: Gwyn, Private Capital, p. 118.
- P. 153 Responsibilities of attorney general: Johnson, Macdonald, pp. 207–208.
- Pp. 153–54 Macdonald and Indian affairs: Smith, “John A. Macdonald and Aboriginal Canada,” pp. 10–14.
- P. 155 Macdonald and Rev. Peter Jones: Smith, ibid., p. 20.
- Pp. 155–56 Lewis, “all Criminal Law should be considered a transcript of the Divine Law”: Bellomo, “Attitudes Towards Crime,” p. 11.
- P. 156 Macdonald on sentence for attempted sodomy: letter to provincial secretary, May 7, 1864, LAC, Macdonald Fonds, vol. 587.

- P. 156 Macdonald on sentencing of thirteen-year-old girl: letter to provincial secretary, Nov. 16, 1864, ibid.
- P. 157 Macdonald on sentencing of Samuel Ross: July 12, 1858, Johnson and Stelmack, Letters of Sir John A. Macdonald, vol. 2, p. 65. Macdonald on poverty of another prisoner: June 15, 1859, ibid., p. 151.
- P. 157 Macdonald, “Your natural kindness of disposition”: Oct. 31, 1871, Creighton Papers, LAC, Macdonald Fonds, MG 29, F 9-3.
- P. 157 Brown, “the moral tomb of those who enter them”: Bellomo, “Attitudes Towards Crime,” p. 22.
- Pp. 157-58 Macdonald, “Cut him dead”: Gwyn, Private Capital, pp. 93-94.
- P. 158 Macdonald, “The first duty of a Government”: June 19, 1871, LAC, Macdonald Letters, LB-15, pp. 940-41.
- P. 158 Macdonald, “We are satisfied that these requirements”: letter to Bench, Feb. 13, 1855, Johnson, Letters of Sir John A. Macdonald, vol. 1, pp. 240-41.
- P. 159 Macdonald, “to consider fitness as the first requirement”: Simpson, Spoils, p. 305.
- P. 159 “Sir John was always anxious”: Cartwright, Reminiscences, p. 49.
- P. 159 Macdonald promotion of William Ritchie to Supreme Court chief justice: Dictionary of Canadian Biography, vol. XII, entry for Ritchie.
- P. 159 Macdonald, “He is a Grit”: Stewart, “Macdonald’s Greatest Triumph,” p. 6.
- P. 160 Macdonald, “Certainty of punishment”: Oct. 31, 1871, LAC, Creighton Papers, MG 29 L9-3.
- P. 160 Macdonald, “This is a country of law and order”: MacDermot, “Political Ideas,” p. 250.

CHAPTER II: THE DOUBLE SHUFFLE

- P. 162 Macdonald, “Heap as many epithets and reproaches on me”:
Debates, May 28, 1856, vol. XIII, part V, p. 2283.
- P. 162 Macdonald, “I might, as you know, have been Premier”: Nov.
13, 1856, Johnson, Letters of Sir John A. Macdonald, vol. 1,
p. 392.
- P. 165 Campbell, “I dare say you are very busy”: Swainson, Mac- donald, p. 43.
- P. 165 “Ah, John A., how I love you”: Cartwright, Reminiscences, p.
47.
- P. 165 Maclean, Macdonald “had a wonderful influence over many men”: Willison, Reminiscences, p. 184.
- P. 166 Macdonald, “He destroyed one or two marvellous good plots”: letter to James Strachan, Feb. 9, 1854, Johnson, Letters of
Sir John A. Macdonald, vol. 1, pp. 100–102.
- P. 166 Macdonald, “It’s a damned sharp curve”: Waite, Life and Times,
p. 324.
- P. 166 Macdonald, “We are losing everywhere”: letter to Becher,
Dec. 14, 1857, Johnson, Letters of Sir John A. Macdonald,
vol. 1, p. 472.
- P. 167 Macdonald, “Canvass steadily and vigorously”: Johnson,
Macdonald, p. 218.
- P. 167 Macdonald, “I am infinitely obliged to you”: Johnson, Letters of Sir John A. Macdonald, vol. 1, p. 1.
- P. 167 clientelism “long assumed to be a normal part of the political process”: Noel, Patrons, p. 15.
- P. 168 Zimmerman claims more members to be found in own apartment: ibid., p. 117.
- P. 168 Macdonald, “keep the Whitby Post Office [position] open”: letter to Smith, May 23, 1861, Johnson, Letters of Sir John
A. Macdonald, vol. 1, p. 366.

- Pp. 168–69 Macdonald, “As soon as Toronto returns Conservative members”: Stewart, Origins, p. 65.
- P. 169 Macdonald, “De L’Armitage is dying”: July 12, 1856, Johnson, Letters of Sir John A. Macdonald, vol. 1, p. 326.
- P. 169 Macdonald, “I have a letter from Noel wanting the Notaryship of the Bank”: letter to Charles Ross, June 7, 1864, ibid., vol. 3.
- P. 171 Macdonald, “It was of the very greatest importance”: Debates, Oct. 27, 1854, vol. XII, part II, p. 830.
- P. 171 Macdonald, “that the agitation will still be kept up” and “There is no maxim which experience teaches more clearly”: Debates, Nov. 6, 1854, vol. II, part II, pp. 897, 942–46.
- P. 173 “He should be sorry” and “if they [the opposition] could make the world all of one way of thinking”: Creighton, Politician, p. 221.
- P. 174 Queen’s choice of Ottawa as capital: Gwyn, Private Capital, p. 37.
- P. 174 Head, “the least objectionable”: Memorandum, CHR, vol. 16 (1935), p. 417.
- P. 175 Macdonald, “an insult offered to the Queen”: telegram to S. Amsden, July 30, 1858, Johnson, Letters of Sir John A. Macdonald, vol. 2, p. 70.
- P. 177 Macdonald, “Some fish require to be toyed with”: Creighton, Politician, p. 267.
- Pp. 177–78 Macdonald’s comments on Cartier: Johnson and Stelmack, Letters of Sir John A. Macdonald, vol. 2, pp. 22, 235, 238.
- Pp. 178–81 Description of Cartier: Sweeny, Cartier; Young, Montreal Bourgeois; Dictionary of Canadian Biography, vol. X; Best, “George-Etienne Cartier,” thesis.
- P. 179 “his career demonstrates the power of railways”: Young, Montreal Bourgeois, p. xii.

- P. 180 Cartier, “The prosperity of Montreal”: Underhill, National Political Parties, p. 372.
- P. 181 Cartier, “That is quite correct, I do not consult anybody”: Moore, 1867, p. 136.
- P. 181 Cartier, “The activity of the heart”: Monck, My Canadian Leaves, p. 149.
- P. 181 Description of Luce Cuvillier: Young, Montreal Bourgeois, p. 35.
- P. 181 Macdonald, “sheet anchor”: letter to George Benjamin, June 4, 1861, Johnson and Stelmack, Letters of Sir John A. Macdonald, vol. 2, p. 342.
- P. 182 Cartier’s plan to retire to England: Young, Montreal Bourgeois, p. 45.

CHAPTER 12: ISABELLE, HUGH JOHN AND DAISY

- P. 183 “grey unrelieved tragedy”: Creighton, Politician, p. 260.
- P. 183 Macdonald, “bare his bottom with dignity”: Aug. 21, 1857, letter to Helen Macdonald, Johnson, Affectionately, p. 82.
- Pp. 184–86 Dr. McSherry’s diagnosis of Isabella’s illness: McSherry, “The Illness of the First Mrs. John A. Macdonald,” pp. 31–37.
- P. 185 Dr. Hyde’s diagnosis: commentary to author.
- P. 187 Macdonald, “In the first place, tell Hugh that I am extremely pleased at the report”: April 11, 1861, letter to Louisa, Johnson, Affectionately, p. 95.
- P. 188 James Williamson’s letters to father: Phenix, Demons, pp. 112–19.
- P. 189 Ploughboy shipwreck scare: July 7, 1859, letter to Margaret: Johnson, Affectionately, p. 91.

CHAPTER 13: DOUBLE MAJORITY

- Pp. 190–91 British commentary on Macdonald as “a distinguished statesman” and “the principal man”: Stewart, “Imperial Policy,” thesis, p. 108 (fn).
- P. 191 “Whither Are We Drifting?”: Colonist, June 29, 1858.
- P. 191 Jones, “through British American territory to the Pacific”: Pope, Day, p. 50.
- P. 192 “an almost total absence of a literature of pessimism”: Fallis, “Idea of Progress,” p. 176.
- P. 194 Keefer, “Steam has exerted an influence over matter”: Nelles, Philosophy of Railroads, p. xxv.
- P. 194–95 “Steam conquered space and time”; Bliss, Northern Enterprise, pp. 161–62.
- P. 195 Keefer, “Ignorance and prejudice will flee”: Nelles, Philosophy of Railroads, p. xxxvii.
- P. 195 Canadian Gem, “Canada is destined to become one of the finest countries”: Morton, Sbiel, p. 171.
- P. 195 Hind, “a magnificent future . . . which shall place the province”: Fallis, “Idea of Progress,” p. 172.
- P. 196 “Upon my word, I do not think that there is much to be said”: Noel, Patrons, p. 137.
- P. 196 Macdonald, “We are having a hard fight in the House”: letter to Margaret Williamson, March 29, 1858, Johnson, Affectionately, p. 89.
- P. 196 Macdonald, “We are getting on very slowly”: letter to Helen Macdonald, June, 17, 1858, ibid., p. 90.
- P. 196 Pope, “I believe, [he] had fully made up his mind”: Creighton, Politician, p. 337.
- P. 197 Macdonald, “When I have looked back upon my public life”: Kingston speech, November 1860, Macpherson, Macdonald, pp. 296–98.

- P. 197 Macdonald, “He is a very good fellow”: letter to Margaret, Johnson, Affectionately, p. 94.
- P. 198 Macdonald, “Take things pleasantly”: Waite, Life and World, p. 18.
- P. 198 Macdonald, “For twenty long years”: Pope, Memoirs, Appendix F, pp. 526–30.
- P. 199 Macdonald, “too abstract a question”: letter to Brown Chamberlin, 1855, Johnson, Letters of Sir John A. Macdonald, vol. 1, p. 292.
- P. 200 Globe, “Our French rulers”: Sweeny, Cartier, p. 100.
- P. 200 Brown, “a deep scheme of Romish Priestcraft”: Slattery, McGee, p. 41.
- P. 200 Macdonald, “The Elections will come off in June”: letter to Ryerson, May 29, 1861, Johnson and Stelmack, Letters of Sir John A. Macdonald, vol. 2, p. 331.
- P. 200 Macdonald, “We must soothe the Orangemen”: letter to Sidney Smith, Oct. 13, 1860, ibid., vol. 2, p. 168.
- P. 200 Macdonald, “politics is a game requiring great coolness”: ibid.
- P. 201 Macdonald, qualified double-majority: Russell, Constitutional Odyssey, p. 16.
- P. 203 Globe, “The disruption of the existing union”: Morton, The Critical Years, p. 72.
- P. 203 Macdonald, “I am a sincere unionist”: Johnson, Macdonald, p. 225.
- P. 204 “was known to have an amorous disposition”: Roy, Kingston, p. 163.
- P. 204 Macdonald, “There is no wisdom below belt”: Waite, “Sir John A. Macdonald: The Man,” p. 151.
- P. 204 “I have never met”: Jameson, Summer Rambles, p. 139.
- P. 205 Macdonald, “I forgot to tell you”: letter to Margaret Greene, Nov. 3, 1845, Johnson, Affectionately, p. 37.
- Pp. 205–206 St. Valentine’s Day ball: Macpherson, Macdonald, pp. 38–39; and Newman, Album, p. 46.

- P. 207 Macdonald and Agnes Bernard in Toronto and Quebec City: Reynolds, Agnes, pp. 28–30.
- P. 207 Macdonald, “a warm, personal friend”: letter to Helen Macdonald, Oct. 20, 1858, Johnson, Affectionately, p. 90.
- Pp. 207–208 Hall, “My loved John”: Dec. 21, 1860, LAC, Macdonald Fonds, vol. 545; and Newman, Album, p. 46.
- P. 208 Macdonald, “P. S. You can make love to Polly”: Johnson and Stelmack, Letters of Sir John A. Macdonald, vol. 2, p. 402.
- Pp. 209–11 Eliza Grimason description: Newman, Album; Phenix, Demons; and Biggar, Anecdotal Life, pp. 238–40.
- P. 210 “the shrine of John A.’s worshippers”: Roy, Kingston, p. 193.
- P. 211 “central, emotional dead spot”: Johnson, Macdonald, p. 202.
- P. 211 “because women know men”: Willison, Reminiscences, p. 178.
- P. 212 “It is not too much to say”: Waite, “Sir John A. Macdonald: The Man,” p. 146.
- Pp. 212–13 Head, “If it is difficult for any statesman”: July 16, 1857, House of Commons Parliamentary Papers, 1857–58, vol. 40, pp. 12–15.
- P. 213 “never so intimate with any Governor-General”: Pope, Memoirs, p. 141.

CHAPTER 14: THE SHIELD OF ACHILLES

- P. 215 Macdonald, “quite willing personally”: letter to Watkin, March 27, 1865, Waite, Confederation Debates, p. 228.
- P. 216 McGee, “Who reads a Canadian book?": Hamilton Gazette, June 8, 1854.
- P. 216 McGee, description: Slattery, McGee; and Dictionary of Canadian Biography, vol. IX.
- P. 217 McGee, “I see in the not remote distance”: Slattery, McGee, p. 137.
- P. 218 McGee, “one of expedients, a succession of make-shifts”: ibid., p. 82.

- P. 218 Macdonald, “Never did a man throw away a fine career”: letter to Henry Smith, Oct. 28, 1858, Johnson and Stelmack, Letters of Sir John A. Macdonald, vol. 2, p. 91.
- P. 219 McGee, “ready and dextrous”: Slattery, McGee, p. 93.
- P. 219 Galt description: Skelton, Galt; and Dictionary of Canadian Biography, vol. XII.
- Pp. 219–20 Macdonald, “You call yourself a Rouge”: letter to Galt, Nov. 2, 1857, Johnson, Letters of Sir John A. Macdonald, vol. 1, p. 457.
- P. 221 Macdonald, “unstable as water”: Van den Otten, “Alexander Galt.”
- P. 222 Cauchon memorandum on the “Red River and Saskatchewan Country”: Zaslow, Canadian North, p. 2.
- P. 223 Report on West by Hind: ibid., p. 3
- P. 225 Cartier warning to Bulwer-Lytton: Sweeny, Cartier, pp. 120–21.
- P. 226 Early Confederation proposals: Upton, “The Idea of Confederation,” in Morton, Shield.
- P. 227 Bulwer-Lytton, “the convenience of the present Canadian administration”: Careless, Brown, vol. 1, p. 284.
- P. 228 Macdonald, Address to the Electors: in Johnson and Stelmack, Letters of Sir John A. Macdonald, vol. 2, pp. 345–51.
- P. 229 Macdonald, “As you are situated”: letter to Benjamin, June 4, 1861, ibid., vol. 2, p. 342.
- Pp. 230–31 Brown at Reform convention: George Brown, “Reform Convention,” p. 262.
- P. 231 “some joint authority”: ibid., p. 263.
- Pp. 232–35 Prince of Wales’s tour: Radforth, Royal Spectacle.
- P. 233 Macdonald, “Our administration is more familiar”: Johnson, Macdonald, p. 210.
- P. 233 Citizen, “Ottawa appeared lovely and anxious as a bride”: Radforth, Royal Spectacle, p. 48.
- P. 235 Orangemen sing, “Water, water, holy water”: ibid., p. 184.
- P. 235 New York Times, “a rational population”: ibid., p. 198.

- P. 235 Prince a “heart smasher”: ibid., p. 332.
- P. 235 (fn) Prince of Wales, “Ah, it looks very well from the water”:
Cartwright, Reminiscences, p. 30.
- P. 236 “the biggest liar in all Canada”: Thompson, Reminiscences, p. 251.
- P. 237 “I am a sincere unionist”: Macdonald, speech in London, Nov.
12, 1860, Address to the Electors, Appendix A, pp. 3–6.
- P. 237 “It had called the attention of the world”: ibid., Appendix A, pp. 28–35.
- P. 238 “It has been said that I and my Upper Canadian colleagues”:
ibid., Appendix A, pp. 23–25.
- P. 238 Macdonald, “wearisome beyond description”: letter to James Gowan, March 12, 1861, Johnson and Stelmack, Letters of Sir John A. Macdonald, vol. 2, pp. 311–12.
- P. 239 Macdonald, “violent Tories who are fools enough”: Johnson,
Macdonald, p. 222.

CHAPTER 15: CANADA’S FIRST ANTI-AMERICAN

- P. 241 “The fratricidal conflict”: Macdonald, Address to the Electors, in Johnson and Stelmack, Letters of Sir John A. Macdonald,
vol. 2, p. 351.
- P. 242 Macdonald on Lincoln as “a beast”: letter to Judge Gowan,
Nov. 27, 1864, LAC, MG27 1E17.
- P. 243 “a huge bird chiseled in stone”: Winks, Civil War, pp. 24–28.
- P. 243 (fn) Lyons, “a rough westerner of the lowest origin”: Morton,
Union, p. 88.
- P. 244 Russell, “a sudden declaration of war”: Winks, Civil War, p. 56.
- P. 244 (fn) “if the North thought fit at this time”: Smith, My Memory of Gladstone (London: T.F. Unwin, 1904), pp. 43–44.
- P. 245 “Secession first he would put down”: Winks, Civil War, p. 50.
- P. 245 Macdonald, “If they [Americans] are to be severed in two”:
speech in House, April 19, 1861; Pope, Memoirs, pp. 242–43.

- P. 245 Macdonald, “will return to Canada sadder and wiser men”: letter to McMicken, Feb. 15, 1865, LAC, Macdonald Fonds, vol. 587.
- P. 245 Macdonald silences Conservatives cheering Southern victory: Cartwright, Reminiscences, p. 24.
- P. 246 The Trent crisis: Winks, Civil War, pp. 71–77.
- P. 247 Lincoln, “one war at a time”: ibid., p. 77.
- P. 247 World, “The simple fact is, Canada hates us”: ibid., p. 99 (fn).
- P. 247 Snowshoes called “creepers”; Bourne, Balance of Power, p. 224.
- P. 248 Macdonald, “The day was hot”: Pope, Day, p. 9.
- Pp. 249 Macdonald, “There is no chance of there being”: Johnson, Macdonald, p. 232.
- P. 250 Herald, “overrun the Province in three weeks”: Slattery, McGee, p. 156.
- P. 251 Macdonald, “He is evidently an able man”: letter to Margaret Greene, Nov. 20, 1845, Johnson, Affectionately, p. 42.
- P. 251 Macdonald, “By the election of the President”: Wise and Brown, Canada Views, p. 100.
- P. 252 Macdonald, “I do not think there is anything in the world”: letter to James Gowan, June 27, 1871, Macdonald Fonds, vol. 589, pp. 972–75.
- P. 252 Macdonald, “It has been said that the United States is a failure”: Martin, Foundations, p. 298.
- P. 253 McGee, “It is not the figures [of soldiers] which give the worst view”: Wise and Brown, Canada Views, p. 109.
- P. 254 Jefferson to “liberate” Canada: Hyam, Britain’s Century, p. 180.
- P. 254 (fn) Taché, “the last cannon which is shot”: Dictionary of Canadian Biography, vol. IX.
- P. 255 American settlers as “Aliens”: Errington, The Lion, the Eagle, pp. 166–87.
- P. 255 McGee, “they coveted Florida”: Wise and Brown, Canada Views, p. 109.

- P. 256 Church, “For four years”: ibid., p. 48.
- P. 256 Bethune, “the extravagant wanderings”: ibid., p. 49.
- P. 257 Davin, “where there is nothing to differentiate”: Berger, Sense of Power, p. 157.
- P. 257 “a seeming contradiction”: Wise and Brown, Canada Views, p. 94.
- P. 259 “have always found it very hard to believe”: Cartwright, Reminiscences, p. 60.
- P. 262 “an active force of 50,000”: Creighton, Politician, p. 330.
- P. 262 Macdonald, “I am at last free”: letter to Margaret Williamson, May 23, 1862, Johnson, Affectionately, pp. 96–97.
- P. 263 “has had one of his old attacks”: Globe, May 15, 1862.
- P. 263 (fn) Globe, “in a state of wild excitement”: Martin, “Bottle,” p. 166.
- P. 263 Monck, “nominally by illness”; Batt, Monck, p. 50.
- P. 263 Macdonald, “slap your chops”: Swainson, Macdonald, p. 54.
- P. 263 “The cleverest man of the lot”: Martin, “Bottle,” p. 167.
- P. 264 Macpherson, “I called at your office twice”: letter of 1839, Teatero, “Dead and Alive,” thesis, p. 226.
- P. 264 “particularly true for the period of his widowerhood”: Pope, Day, p. 166.
- Pp. 264–65 “leading a very dissipated life”: Cartwright, Reminiscences, p. 32.
- P. 265 Kingston’s 136 taverns: Martin, “Bottle,” p. 165.
- P. 265 “Professional men were not ashamed”: Moodie, Life in the Clearings, p. 45.
- P. 266 Meredith, “Captain Sparks was hopelessly drunk”: Gwyn, Private Capital, p. 189.
- P. 266 Lady Monck, “such drunkenness”: Batt, Monck, pp. 84–85.
- P. 266 “One-half of all the crime”: Burnet, “Changing Naval Standards.” in Horn and Sabourin, Studies in Canadian Social History.
- P. 267 Kimberley, “He should have been in the good old times”: Creighton, Old Chieftain, pp. 158–59.

- P. 267 Macdonald, “Yes, but the people would prefer John A. drunk” and “Mr. Chairman, I don’t know how it is”: Biggar, Anecdotal Life, pp. 193–94.
- P. 268 Northcote, “People do not attribute his drinking”: April 29, 1870, Morton, Manitoba, p. 98.
- Pp. 268–69, Macdonald, “we have shown that we do not wish to cling”: Creighton, Politician, p. 335.

CHAPTER 16: THE WILL TO SURVIVE

- P. 271 Brown, “Already I long to be back with you”: Careless, “Mother of Confederation,” p. 79.
- P. 271 Anne Brown, studies in Germany: ibid., p. 58.
- P. 272 Mowat, “the softer side of his nature”: Careless, Brown, vol. 2, p. 186.
- P. 272 Anne Brown, “You must never speak of settling down here”: ibid., vol. 2, p. 188.
- P. 273 Brydges, “omnibus arrangement”: Creighton, Politician, p. 349.
- P. 273 Brown, “grimalkin”: Globe, April 30, 1863.
- P. 273 Macdonald, McGee, “A drunken man is a terrible curse”: Slattery, McGee, p. 207.
- P. 273 McGee, “the fortunate genius”: ibid., p. 230.
- P. 274 Times, “numerous enough to irritate”: Martin, Britain and Confederation, p. 185.
- P. 275–76 Macdonald, “It is stated [by some opponents of Confederation]”: Browne, Documents on Confederation, pp. 95–96.
- P. 276 Macdonald, “We must, therefore, become important”: ibid.
- P. 278 Britain’s share of world trade: Hyam, Britain’s Imperial Century, p. 99.
- P. 280 Disraeli, “a millstone around our necks”: Alice Stewart, “Imperial Policy,” thesis, p. 160.
- P. 280 Disraeli, “power and influence we should exercise”: ibid.

- P. 280 Edinburgh Review, “productive of heavy expense”: Slattery, McGee, p. 58.
- P. 280 Taylor, “a sort of damnosa hereditas”: Waite, “Cardwell and Confederation,” p. 27.
- P. 280 Melbourne, “the final separation of these colonies”: Martin, Britain and Confederation, p. 166.
- P. 280 (fn) Cobden, “looked more English”: Morton, Union, p. 2.
- Pp. 281 Peel, “the tenure by which we hold [them]”: Martin, Britain and Confederation, p. 167.
- P. 281 Russell, “the loss of a great portion of our Colonies”: ibid.
- P. 281 Palmerston, “it would lower us greatly”: ibid.
- P. 281 Macdonald, “to raise revenue in [its] own fashion”: Johnson, Macdonald, p. 234.
- P. 281 Macdonald, “a matter of the gravest importance”: memorandum to Head, March 6, 1861, Johnson and Stelmack, Letters of Sir John A. Macdonald, vol. 2, pp. 306–307.
- P. 282 Cardwell, “lynx-eyed logicians”: Waite, Cardwell, pp. 20–21.
- P. 282 State of Colonial Office: Farr, Colonial Office, pp. 33–34.
- P. 283 Times, “Who is Minister, at Quebec City”: Martin, Britain and Confederation, p. 147.
- P. 283 Gordon, “a last resort”: ibid., p. 138.
- P. 283 Times, “a wealthier and more completely English”: ibid.
- P. 283 Trollope, “Not one man in a thousand”: Porter, Imperialists, p. 110.
- P. 283 “felt himself like a cat in a strange garret”: ibid., p. 251.
- P. 283 Brown, “after all I have seen”: Careless, Brown, vol. 2, p. 75.
- P. 284 Newcastle, “Do not remain under such an error”: Martin, Britain and Confederation, p. 65.
- P. 284 Laurier, “armed with an eggshell”: ibid., p. 64.
- P. 284 (fn) Newcastle, “The injury to our own trade”: ibid., p. 67.
- P. 285 Macdonald, “a panic”: Creighton, Politician, p. 410.
- P. 285 Macdonald, “a hole may be made in the mud”: Winks, Civil War, p. 354.

- P. 285 Macdonald, “forcible annexation and abandonment”: letter to Col. Gray, March 27, 1865, Pope, Memoirs, p. 298.
- P. 286 Queen Victoria, “the impossibility of our being able to hold Canada”: Stacey, “British Military Policy,” p. 25.

CHAPTER 17: IRREPLACEABLE MAN

- P. 288 Brown, “Now gentlemen, you must talk to me”: Careless, Brown, vol. 2, p. 127.
- P. 288 “A strong feeling was found to exist”: Creighton, Politician, p. 355.
- P. 289 Macdonald, “the member for South Oxford”: ibid., p. 356.
- P. 289 Brown, “the repeated endeavours year after year”: Reid, Sourcebook, pp. 200–201.
- P. 290 Brown, “You never saw such a scene”: Careless, Brown, vol. 2, p. 135.
- P. 290 Canadien, “comptera parmi les plus memorable”: Waite, Life and Times, pp. 45–46.
- P. 290 Berliner Journal, “George Brown mit John A. Macdonald, Cartier und Galt”: ibid.
- P. 291 Macdonald, “As leader of the Conservatives”: letter to S. Lynn, April 1866, Pope, Correspondence, p. 31.
- P. 292 Cartwright on union with United States: Cartwright, Reminiscences, p. 20.
- P. 292 Cartwright on understanding between Cartier and Brown: ibid.
- P. 293 Macdonald, “If Canada is to remain a Country”: Waite, Confederation Debates, p. 307.
- P. 293 Brown, “I am not so well informed”: Martin, Britain and Confederation, p. 53.
- P. 293 Globe, “Efforts are to be made to induce the Lower Provinces”: ibid.

- P. 294 Smith, "In this country, what is there for Conservatives to conserve": Gwyn, Paradox, p. 36.
- P. 295 "Macdonald practised the Burkean principles": Preece, "Political Philosophy," p. 157.
- P. 295 Preece, "What distinguished Macdonald": ibid., p. 162.
- P. 295 (fn) Webbs' view of Canada: Feaver, "The Webbs in Canada."
- P. 296 "For Macdonald, the word 'reform' was largely devoid of political significance": Waite, "Sir John A. Macdonald: The Man," p. 37.
- P. 297 Macdonald, "I am satisfied to confine myself to practical things": Parliamentary Debates on Confederation, pp. 1001–1002.
- P. 297 "he thumped no tubs": Creighton, Politician, p. 180.
- P. 297 "For the evangelical school of reconstructionists": Willison, Reminiscences, p. 197.
- P. 298 Macdonald, "I am like those who hear me": Address to the Electors, 1860, Appendix A, p. 6.
- P. 299 McGee, "How can you hope to secure the settlement": Slattery, McGee, p. 220.
- P. 299 Monck, "depends very much on your consenting to come into the Cabinet": Careless, Brown, vol. 2, p. 138.
- P. 299 Brown, "There was no help for it": ibid., p. 140.
- P. 300 Brown, "it will cost half the revenue to the province": letter to John A., August 14, 1864, Pope, Memoirs, pp. 281–82.
- P. 300 Macdonald, "that I may call on you to lay aside": letter, July 7, 1864, ibid., pp. 276–77.
- P. 301 Brown, "bearing symptoms of having been on a spree": Careless, Brown, vol. 2, p. 151.
- P. 301 Brown, "John A. and I were the only civilians": ibid., p. 150.
- P. 301 Brown, "For the first time in my political life": Waite, Life and Times, p. 38.
- P. 303 Canadians met by oyster boat: ibid., p. 75.7

- P. 304 Brown, “shake elbow and how d’ye-do” and “something to the sea”: Careless, Brown, vol. 2, p. 154.
- P. 304 Islander, “substantials of beef rounds”: Louella Creighton, Elegant Canadians, p. 13.
- P. 304 Brown, “the ice became completely broken”: Careless, Brown, vol. 2, p. 155.
- P. 305 Brown, “They were unanimous”: Wilfrid Smith, introduction to “Tupper’s Minutes.”
- Pp. 305–306 Ross, “The fascinating dance goes merrily”: Waite, Life and Times, p. 79.
- P. 307 Macdonald, “there was no political connection”: Whelan, Union of the Provinces, p. 43.
- Pp. 307–308 Macdonald, “as a commercial enterprise”: ibid., p. 45.
- P. 308 Macdonald, “Everything, gentlemen, is to be gained by union”: ibid., pp. 46–47.

CHAPTER 18: A PACT OF TRUST

- P. 311 Macdonald, “I ha[d] no help”: letter to James Gowan, Nov. 15, 1864.
- P. 311 Feo Monck, “He is always drunk now”: Monck, Canadian Leaves, p. 81.
- P. 312 Rogers, “Macdonald was the ruling genius”: Moore, 1867, pp. 213–14.
- P. 312 Macdonald, “I am satisfied”: letter to M.C. Cameron, Dec. 19, 1864, LAC, Macdonald Fonds, vol. 387.
- P. 313 Macdonald, “should be a mere skeleton and framework”: Waite, Life and Times, p. 120.
- P. 313 Morning-Chronicle, “bump-thump-jump”: ibid., p. 86.
- P. 314 Delegates’ working hours: Moore, 1867, p. 98.
- P. 314 Mercy Coles, “with every stitch of clothing wringing wet”: ibid., pp. 98–99.

- P. 315 Whelan, “the Cabinet ministers—the leading ones especially”:
Waite, “Whelan’s Reports.”
- P. 315 Carter, “retir[e] to the Old Country to spend their fortunes”:
Doughty, “Notes on the Quebec Conference,” p. 26.
- P. 315 Macdonald gets applause for opening speech: Creighton,
Politician, p. 375.
- P. 317 Globe, “Everyone here has had a fit of the blues”: Waite, Life and Times, p. 90.
- P. 317 Palmer, “the current seemed to set with the Canadians”: ibid.,
p. 94.
- P. 317 Mowat, “I quite concur in the advantages”: ibid., p. 95.
- P. 317 Northern Kingdom, “Never was there such an opportunity”:
ibid., p. 88.
- P. 318 Chandler, “merely large municipal corporations”: ibid., p. 95.
- P. 318 Macdonald rejects New Zealand example: Martin, “Archival Evidence.”
- P. 318 Times, “practical and unpretending”: Waite, Life and Times,
p. III.
- P. 319 Brown, “Constitution adopted—a most credible document”:
Careless, Brown, vol. 2, p. 171.
- P. 321 Macdonald, “We have avoided all conflict”: Russell,
Constitutional Odyssey, p. 27.
- P. 321 Globe, “We desire local self-government”: Vipond, “Federal Principle,” p. 14.
- P. 321 (fn) Senators to be knighted: Pope, Memoirs, pp. 727–28, including Macdonald letter to Carnarvon, Jan. 30, 1867.
- P. 322 Macdonald’s books by Madison, Hamilton: Munro, American Influences, p. 18.
- P. 322 Original Swiss constitution: McRoberts, Canada and the Multinational State, p. 695.
- P. 323 Macdonald, “the use of the French language”: Parliamentary Debates on Confederation, p. 944.

- P. 324 Journal de Québec, “can and must one day aspire to being a nation”: Silver, “Quebec and the French-Speaking Minorities,” thesis.
- P. 324 La Minerve, “As a distinct and separate nationality”: ibid.
- P. 326 Macdonald, “a distinct bargain, a solemn contract”: Stanley, “Act or Pact,” p. 142.
- P. 326 Macdonald, “as a matter of fact . . . a Federal Union”: ibid., p. 8.
- P. 327 Macdonald, “The sad experience on the other side”: Sweeny, Cartier, p. 143.
- P. 327 Cartier, “That is not my policy”: ibid.
- P. 327 Taché, “tantamount to a separation”: Jennifer Smith, “Confederation,” p. 454.
- P. 328 Taché, “The important thing to remember”: Sweeny, Cartier, p. 106.
- P. 329 Macdonald, “My great aim”: letter to Buchanan, Oct. 16, 1864, LAC, Macdonald Fonds, vol. 587.
- P. 329 Cameron, “better shown [his] patriotism”: Dec. 19, 1864, ibid., vol. 587.
- P. 330 Macdonald, “I thought my hon. friend knew”: Martin, “Archival Evidence.”
- P. 330 Macdonald, “chief executive officers”: Glazebrook, History of Political Thought, p. 146.
- P. 330 (fn) Tupper, “a large municipality under the Central Government”: Waite, Life and Times, p. 204.
- P. 331 Macdonald, “the Central Government assumes”: Creighton, Politician, p. 403.
- P. 331 Hamilton’s centralizing measures; Munro, American Influences, pp. 19, 33.
- P. 331 Macdonald, “all the powers which are incident to sovereignty”: Vipond, “Federal Principle,” p. 14.
- P. 332 Dunkin, “cry will be found to be pretty often”: Martin, Causes of Confederation, p. 31.

- P. 333 (fn) “Confederation table”: Turner, “Mystery.”
- P. 333 Macdonald, “Have you thought over the formation of the Govt”: letter to Tilley, Nov. 14, 1864, LAC, Macdonald Fonds, vol. 587.
- P. 333 Macdonald, “I intend to commence next week”: letter to Tupper, Nov. 14, 1864, ibid.
- P. 334 St. Alban’s Raid: Winks, Civil War, pp. 311, 314–15.
- P. 334 Macdonald, “the unhappy and mistaken decision of Coursol”: Creighton, Politician, p. 392.
- P. 334–35 Macdonald, “individuals or incorporated companies like Railways”: letter to Thomas Swinyard, Jan. 1, 1865, Macdonald Papers, Letterbook 7.
- P. 335 Repayment to U.S. banks of $70,000: Winks, Civil War, p. 320.
- P. 335 Macdonald, “a shrewd, cool and determined man”: Creighton, Politician, p. 393.
- P. 336 Macdonald, “We can’t help the South”: letter to Buchanan, Oct. 16, 1864, Hamilton Public Library.

CHAPTER 19: PARLIAMENT VS THE PEOPLE

- P. 337 “Then let us be firm and united”: Waite, Life and Times, p. 98.
- P. 338 (fn) Whelan, “illness induced by fatigue”: Waite, “Whelan’s Reports,” p. 139.
- P. 339 Edinburgh Review, “harbinger of the future and complete independence”: Waite, Life and Times, p. 20.
- P. 339 Saturday Review, “not so much a step towards independence”: Martin, Britain and Confederation, p. 173.
- P. 339 Times, “nothing could be more in correspondence”: Stewart, “Imperial Policy,” thesis, p. 138.
- P. 340 Brown, “A most gracious answer”: Careless, Brown, vol. 2, p. 177.
- P. 341 Brown, “Though we had been discussing the highest questions”: ibid.

- P. 341 Adderley, "Gladstone said to me the other day": Batt, Monck, p. 152.
- P. 342 Brown, "John A.'s business affairs are in sad disorder": Careless, ibid., p. 190.
- P. 343 Macdonald, "Canada on the whole": letter to Tupper, Nov. 14, 1864, Pope, Correspondence, p. 13.
- P. 344 Dorion, "true confederation": Waite, Pre-Confederation, p. 221.
- P. 344 "create a new nationality": Slattery, McGee, p. 268.
- P. 344 Whelan, "a patch of sandbank in the Gulf": Waite, Life and Times, p. 186.
- P. 346 Macdonald, "was in the nature of a treaty": Ajzenstat, Founding Debates, p. 421.
- P. 346 Macdonald, "If this measure received the support of the House": ibid., p. 422.
- P. 347 Macdonald, "general if not universal favour": letter to John Beattie, Feb. 3, 1865, Pope, Correspondence, p. 21.
- P. 348 Macdonald, "Parliament is a grand inquest": Lockhart, "Contribution."
- P. 349 Macdonald, "the tyranny of mere numbers": Johnson, Macdonald, p. 220.
- P. 349 "one of those dreadful American heresies": Globe, Nov. 5, 1864.
- P. 349 Brown, "the balance of power is held by the ignorant": Wise, Peculiar Peoples, p. 137.
- P. 349 McGee, "The proposed Confederation": Ajzenstat, Founding Debates, pp. 189–90.
- P. 350 O'Halloran, "When we assume the power": ibid., pp. 449–51.
- P. 350 Hamilton Times, "If their [the people's] direct decision": Martin, Causes of Confederation, p. 30.
- P. 351 Macdonald, "We in this house": Ajzenstat, Founding Debates, pp. 455–63.

- P. 351 (fn) Macdonald denounces conventions as “immoral and democratic”: letter to Henry Becher, Mar. 15, 1862, LAC, Macdonald Fonds, vol. 587.
- P. 352 Macdonald, “a strong and lasting government”: letter to S. Amsden, Dec. 1, 1864, ibid., vol. 397.
- P. 353 Macdonald, “the best, the cheapest”: Ajzenstat, Founding Debates, p. 279.
- P. 353 Macdonald, “lose their individuality”: Reid, Source-book, p. 208.
- P. 353 Macdonald, “it is an advance towards independence”: ibid., p. 209.
- P. 354 Dunkin, “What are we doing?”: Ajzenstat, Founding Debates, p. 236.
- P. 354 Cartier, “When we were united together”: Parliamentary Debates on Confederation, p. 60.
- P. 355 Mackenzie, “I do not think the federal system is necessarily a weak one”: ibid., speech of Feb. 23.
- P. 355 Stratford Beacon, “an unmistakably seedy condition”: Waite, Life and Times, p. 156.
- P. 356 Macdonald, “full of fight”: Martin, Britain and Confederation, p. 244.

CHAPTER 20: THE ADMINISTRATION OF STRANGERS

- P. 357 Macdonald, “declaration against the policy of Confederation”: Creighton, Politician, p. 406.
- P. 358 Macdonald, “any signs of weakness”: Martin, Foundations, p. 365.
- P. 358 Macdonald, “stick with the ship”: Lockhart, “Macdonald Conservatism,” p. 129.
- P. 358 Macdonald on Tilley, “unstatesmanlike”: Moore, 1867, p. 169.
- P. 358 Tupper, “under existing circumstances”: Creighton, Politician, p. 409.

- P. 359 Dorion, “This scheme is killed”: Martin, Foundations, p. 365.
- P. 360 Macdonald, “the most seminal mind”: Waite, “Sir John A. Macdonald: The Man,” p. 147.
- P. 361 Howe, “live and die in insignificance”: Waite, Life and Times, p. 71.
- P. 361 Howe, “play second-fiddle to that damn’d Tupper”: Dictionary of Canadian Biography, vol. X.
- P. 361 Howe, “I am a dear lover of old England”: Beck, Howe, p. 210.
- P. 361 Howe, “You go down to the sea in ships”: ibid., p. 202.
- P. 361–62 Howe, “London [was] large enough”: ibid.
- P. 362 Howe, “with an Indian name”: ibid., p. 201.
- P. 362 Howe, “away from tidewater”: Martin, Causes of Confederation, p. 44.
- P. 362 Howe, “The builders of Babel”; Beck, Howe, p. 205.
- P. 363 Tupper, “a great body of the trading men”: Reid, Source-book, p. 277.
- P. 363 (fn) Howe, “deadly weapons, so common”: to George Moffat, May 8, 1849.
- P. 364 Howe, “this crazy Confederacy”: Slattery, McGee, p. 425.
- P. 364 Brown, “we hear much talkee-talkee”: Careless, Brown, vol. 2, p. 165.
- P. 366 Ryerson, “a man does not love the King”: Berger, Sense of Power, p. 103.
- P. 366 Rev. Gray, “spirit of submission”: ibid.
- P. 367 “nationalistic history”: ibid., p. 90.
- P. 367 “the primacy of the community over individual selfishness”: ibid., p. 103.
- P. 367 Wood, “The bond of union between Canada and the other provinces”: Aizenstat, Founding Debates, pp. 215–17.
- P. 368 Taché, “the last cannon which is shot”: Dictionary of Canadian Biography, vol. IX.
- P. 368 Collins, “more than any other Canadian statesman”: Griffith, Speech to Kingston Historical Society.

- P. 368 Davin, “the type of politician”: Willison, Reminiscences, pp. 34–37.
- P. 369 British American, “They are more American”: Waite, Life and Times, p. 230.

CHAPTER 21: THE TURN OF THE SCREW

- P. 371 Cardwell, “Our official dispatch”: memorandum, Dec. 10, 1864, Colonial Office., British North American Provinces Correspondence Respecting the Proposed Union (London, 1867).
- P. 371 Cardwell (to Monck), “to turn the screw”: Batt, Monck, p. 109.
- P. 372 Brown, “Dukes and Duchesses had to give way”: Careless, Brown, vol. 2, p. 196.
- P. 372 Galt, “down on the right knee”: Skelton, Galt, pp. 379–80.
- P. 373 Brown, “whether Darwin believed”: Martin, Britain and Confederation, p. 264.
- P. 373–74 Derby Day description: ibid., pp. 383–86.
- P. 374 Brown, “are a different race from us”: Careless, Brown, vol. 2, p. 197.
- P. 374 Galt, “We were treated as if we were ambassadors”: Martin, Britain and Confederation, p. 261.
- P. 374 Macdonald, “This is the greatest honour”: letter to Louisa, June 17, 1865, Johnson, Affectionately, pp. 98–99.
- P. 375 Telegraph’s calculation of election result: Waite, Life and Times, p. 246.
- P. 375 Tilley, “an expenditure of 8 or ten thousand dollars”: Martin, Foundations, p. 372.
- P. 375 Gordon, “I am convinced I can make (or buy)”: ibid., vol. 2., p. 209.
- P. 376 Brown, no “personal aspirations whatever”: ibid., vol. 2, p. 201.
- P. 377 Macdonald, “The union of all the Provinces is a fixed fact”: Ottawa Citizen, Sept. 29, 1865.

- P. 378 Brown, “Thank Providence—I am a free man”: Careless, Brown, vol. 2, p. 207.
- P. 378 Brown, “is a very serious matter for the Maritime provinces”: ibid., p. 189.
- P. 378 Brown, “a most inconvenient and inexpedient device”: Globe, Aug. 8, 1866.
- P. 379 Brown, “I want to be free to write”: Waite, Life and Times, p. 43.
- P. 379 Macdonald on Brown, “gave me assistance”; Moore, Fathers, p. 246.
- P. 380 Memorial services for Lincoln in black churches: Winks, Civil War, p. 166.
- P. 381 Monck, “helplessness, inertness and dependence”: Stacey, “Fenianism,” p. 248.
- P. 381 McMicken detective, “one thousand dollars is offered in gold”: Slattery, McGee, p. 303.
- P. 382 Tilley to Macdonald, “Telegraph me in cipher” and “To be frank with you,” and Galt to Macdonald, “That means had better be used”: Martin, Foundations, pp. 373–74; and Wilson, “New Brunswick and Confederation,” pp. 23–24.
- P. 383 McMicken detective, “1,500 Fenians landed at Fort Erie”: Senior, Last Invasion, p. 83, and following description of Fenian battles.
- P. 383 Globe, “The autonomy of British America”: Stacey, “Fenianism,” p. 252.
- P. 385 Monck to Macdonald, “valuable time is being lost”: Reid, Source-book, pp. 280–81.
- P. 386 Macdonald, “The proceedings have arrived at the stage that success is certain”: ibid.
- P. 386 Monck, “your right as a leader of the Government”: ibid.
- P. 387 Macdonald vomits on Government House chair: Batt, Monck, p. 34.
- P. 387 Macdonald, “Look here McGee”: Slattery, McGee, p. 337.

- P. 387 Brown, “John A was drunk on Friday”: Careless, Brown, vol. 2, p. 234.
- P. 388–89 Macdonald, “The Bill should not be finally settled”: Reid, Source-book, pp. 282–83.
- P. 388 Globe scoop on BNA Act: Careless, Brown, vol. 2, pp. 240–41.
- P. 389 Macdonald, “the Act once passed”: letter to Tilley, Oct. 8, 1866, ibid.

CHAPTER 22: THE MAN OF THE CONFERENCE

- P. 390 Langevin, “Macdonald is a sharp fox”: Moore, 1867, p. 212.
- Pp. 390–91 Macdonald, “no minutes of the various discussions should be taken”: Martin, Foundations, p. 385.
- P. 391 Macdonald, “avoid any publicity”: ibid., p. 386.
- P. 391 Morning Chronicle, “vanity struck”: Waite, Life and Times, p. 295.
- P. 391 Howe, “lonely, weary and vexed”: Dictionary of Canadian Biography, vol. X.
- P. 392 Carnarvon, “occasionally so drunk as to be incapable”: Martin, Britain and Confederation, p. 280.
- P. 392 Macdonald, “for fear that an alarming story may reach you”: letter to Louisa, Dec. 27, 1866, Johnson, Affectionately, pp. 102–103.
- P. 393 Macdonald, “We are quite free to discuss points”: Reid, Source-book, p. 243.
- P. 394 Reilly, “I can’t make bricks”: Martin, Britain and Confederation, p. 282.
- P. 395 Thring’s draft legislation on independence: ibid., p. 190.
- P. 395 Bury’s proposal for agreement on independence: ibid.
- P. 395 Howe, “the almost universal feeling”: ibid., p. 171.
- P. 396 Macdonald, “one of her own family, a Royal prince”: Parliamentary Debates on Confederation, Feb. 6, 1865.

- P. 396 Queen Victoria, “dearest Albert had often thought”: Martin, “Queen Victoria and Canada,” p. 227.
- P. 396 (fn) “in some speeches he had said”: Monck, My Canadian Leaves, p. 82.
- P. 397 Disraeli, “It is so like Derby”: letter to Lord Knutsford, July 18, 1889, LAC, Macdonald Fonds, vol. 529.
- P. 397 (fn) Monck, “the natural yearning”: Batt, Monck, p. 143.
- P. 397 (fn) Tilley’s letter on “Dominion”: LAC, F/5002, T-54.
- P. 398 Carnarvon, “derives its political existence”: Scott, “Political Nationalism,” p. 407.
- P. 398 “One might almost say”: P.B. Waite, “Ideas and Politics in British North America, 1864–66,” PhD thesis, University of Toronto, 1953, p. 443.
- P. 399 Smith, “the sentiment of provincial independence”: Macmillan’s Magazine, London, p. 408.
- P. 402 Anderson, “imagined communities”: Gwyn, Nationalism Without Walls, p. 20.
- P. 403 “Not life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness”: Morton, Canadian Identity, p. 111 (1961 ed.).

CHAPTER 23: TWO UNIONS

- P. 406 Lady Macdonald, “My diaries as Miss Bernard”: Reynolds, Agnes, p. 45.
- P. 407 Lady Macdonald, “I also know that my love of Power is strong”: ibid., p. 50.
- P. 407 Macdonald, “I don’t care for office for the sake of money”: Thompson, Reminiscences, p. 231.
- P. 408 Lady Macdonald, “I have found something worth living for” and “I often look in astonishment”: Newman, Album, p. 86.
- P. 408 Bernard, “everything to dissuade”: Dictionary of Canadian Biography, vol. XII, Macdonald, p. 605

- P. 408 “tall, tawny, and . . . rather ‘raw-boned’”: Biggar, Anecdotal Life, p. 99.
- P. 409 Lady Macdonald, “The French seem always wanting everything”: Gwyn, Private Capital, p. 95.
- P. 409 Lady Macdonald, “tearing down a steep forest roadway”: Phenix, Private Demons, p. 164.
- P. 410 Lady Macdonald, “A forcible yet changeful face”: Macpherson, Macdonald, p. 315.
- P. 410 Macdonald, “very fine eyes”: ibid., p. 315.
- Pp. 410–11 Lady Macdonald, “a delicious country for the rich”: Reynolds, Agnes, p. 55.
- P. 412 Ottawa Citizen, “a bunch of violets”: ibid., p. 39.
- P. 413 Macdonald, “My wife likes it from its novelty to her”: letter to Louisa, March 21, 1867, Johnson, Affectionately, pp. 103–104.
- P. 413 Carnarvon, “We are laying the foundation of a great State”: Bliss, Canadian History, pp. 109–110.
- P. 414 Macdonald, “H.M. said—‘It is a very important measure’”: letter to Louisa, March 21, 1867, Johnson, Affectionately, p. 104.
- P. 415 Nova Scotian, “The great body of the house was utterly indifferent”: Farr, Colonial Office, p. 16.
- Pp. 415–16 Macdonald, “This remarkable event”: letter to Lord Knutsford, July 18, 1884, LAC, Macdonald Fonds, vol. 529.
- P. 416 McGee, “Everyone knew the result was a foregone conclusion”: Martin, Britain and Confederation, p. 289.
- P. 416 Royal Proclamation, 1763, Indians, “not be molested or disturbed”: Russell, Constitutional Odyssey, p. 32.
- P. 416 (fn) Lack of debate at Westminster on colonial subjects: Porter, Absent-Minded Imperialists, p. 107.
- P. 418 Bennett “leaving their bones to bleach in a foreign land”: Martin, Britain and Confederation, p. 62.

- P. 418 BNA Act a blueprint for South Africa and Ireland: Hyam, British Imperial Century, p. 201.
- P. 419 Macdonald, “We must, therefore, become important”: Browne, Documents on Confederation, pp. 95–96.

CHAPTER 24: IDEA IN THE WILDERNESS

- P. 421 Meredith, “John A. carried out of the lunchroom, hopelessly drunk”: Gwyn, Private Capital, p. 97.
- P. 421 Feo Monck, Ottawa “beastly”: Monck Letters, p. 214.
- P. 421 Meredith, “The more I see of Ottawa”: Gwyn, Private Capital, pp. 36–37.
- P. 422 Smith, “the tempering and restraining influences”: Macmillan’s, May 1865.
- P. 422 (fn) “A Canadian settler bates a tree”: Jameson, Winter Studies, p. 49.
- P. 423 Trollope, “The noblest architecture”: Gwyn, Private Capital, p. 38.
- P. 423 Macdonald, tower of West Block “like a cow bell”: Slattery, McGee, p. 338.
- P. 424 “a visionary, if slightly uncertain, idea in the wilderness”: Gwyn, Private Capital, p. 38.
- P. 425 McGee, “give way neither to Galt”: Slattery, McGee, p. 392.
- P. 428 Macdonald, “if the list were settled now”: Pope, Memoirs, Appendix XV, pp. 727–28.
- P. 429 Galt, “It is an ingracious and most unusual thing”: Slattery, McGee, p. 392.
- P. 430 Bourget, “l’obéissance à l’autorité constituée” and statement by Quebec bishops: Waite, Life and Times, pp. 300–301.
- P. 430 Cartier, “The question is reduced to this”: Ajzenstat, Founding Debates, p. 183.
- P. 431 Tribune, “When the experiment of the ‘dominion’”: Shippee, Canadian-American Relations, pp. 198–99.

- P. 431 Sumner, “a visible step”: Callahan, American Foreign Policy, p. 308.
- P. 431 Seward, “I know that Nature designs”: Shippee, Canadian-American Relations, p. 200.
- P. 432 Taylor, “events have presented to the people”: Callahan, American Foreign Policy, p. 304.
- P. 432 Nor’Wester, “Americanism has become rampant”: Waite, Pre-Confederation, p. 147.
- P. 432 Stanley, “Many people would dislike the long boundary line” and “if they choose to separate”: Stacey, “Britain’s Withdrawal,” p. 15.
- P. 433 Adderley, “It seems to me impossible”: Waite, Life and Times, p. 317.
- P. 433 Times, “We look to Confederation as the means of relieving this country”: Stacey, “Britain’s Withdrawal,” p. 14.
- P. 434 Galt, “I am more than ever disappointed”: Skelton, Galt, pp. 410–11.
- P. 435 Macdonald, “British North America is now merely a geographical description”: letter to Monck, April 5, 1867, Pope, Memoirs, p. 730.
- Pp. 435–36 Lady Macdonald, “This new Dominion of ours”: Gwyn, Private Capital, p. 191.
- P. 436 Vindicator, “some of them rush[ed] so closely”: Louella Creighton, Elegant Canadians, pp. 170–71.
- P. 436 Morning Chronicle, “Died! Last night at twelve o’clock,” refusal to allow Queen’s Proclamation, and Yarmouth with no gun salute: Granatstein and Hillmer, First Drafts, pp. 83–84.
- P. 437 Brown, “With the first dawn of this gladsome midsummer morn”: Careless, Brown, vol. 2, p. 252.
- P. 438 Reporter, “From Halifax to Sarnia”: Waite, “Ideas and Politics in British North America, 1864–66,” thesis, p. 442.

- P. 438 Times, “It supposes a nationality”: Waite, Pre-Confederation,
p. 251.
- P. 439 Smith, “to hold together a set of elements”: The Week,
April 10, 1884.
- P. 439 Gowan, “artificer in chief”: Pope, Correspondence, p. 43.